Danette Gossett

Greetings!

The year is definitely off to a busy start. How did it get to be February so quickly?

Events, trade shows and in-person meetings are coming back with a vengeance and everyone is looking to get their brand out there again.

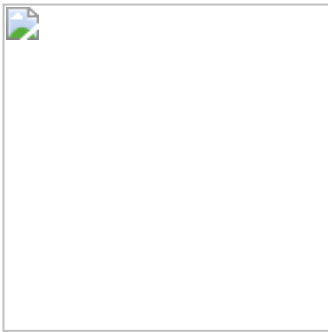

Unfortunately, it still is a challenge with continued supply chain issues, material shortage issues and increased production times. And as such, we still encourage everyone to think ahead. While we do have items that can still be produced on short notice, the choices are not as extensive as they once were.

We have also been working on and producing more custom designed products for our clients lately. Custom products make a lot of sense now if you have the time. If you must wait for "stock" items for months, why not make something unique that really promotes your brand.

We have one being delivered this week for a client's top distributors and is perfect for today's video world. We developed a custom Vlogging Set. This branded set that includes a custom EVA case with the custom zipper to match the client's logo color. Inside the case is a smartphone stabilizer, 10" ring light and microphone. All branded of course. Now, their distributors can produce video blogs, host video meetings, and more with a very professional feel.

Another custom program we just delivered was a specially designed tote bag that includes custom sized pockets inside and out to help the sales force carry specific samples.

We've been creating designing and producing custom products for thirty years so if you want you want your brand to stand out, don't hesitate to reach out.
