Danette Gossett

Greetings!

My goal for the last 12 months and probably through the next 12 months is to make PROGRESS. Progress on so many levels is more of a process than ever before.

First and foremost, I am looking for progress in keeping our families healthy and happy. At the beginning of the "Pandemic" I injured my foot and was unable to walk much for a couple of months. The isolation was grueling to say the least. So, for me, the progress was getting to the point of taking long walks again. And I do, regularly. Being outside in fresh air is so important to me and my personal health progress and I encourage others to do the same.

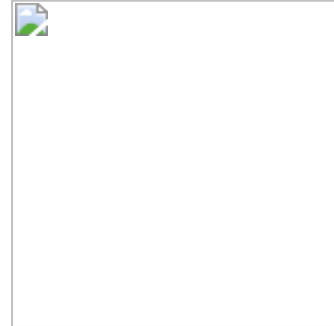

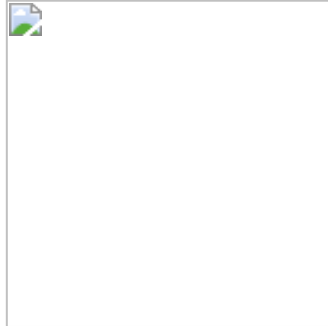

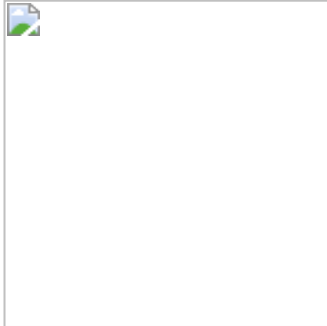

I have also been spending a tremendous amount of time keeping my business in business. Successful progress on this journey was paramount for me and my team. Throughout we have been searching for new products and services to offer. As well as developing new and different ways for our clients to stay in touch with their clients and employees. And it seems to have worked because we are still here. Progress for sure.

Sometimes I feel like I am the tortoise in the tortoise and hare race. Moving at what seems like a snail's pace, or tortoise pace, for progress, but progress we are getting. More and more businesses are opening, more and more people are feeling they can get back to a more normal (yet safe) life.

Making the small moves onward toward our new reality. Many people have expressed that the "Pandemic" has led them to rethinking their life. How they spend their time. Some are changing careers. Some are recognizing they want and need to spend more time with their family and friends and don't want to go back to their "old" ways. And that also is progress.

If any good can come out of what we have all been experiencing for the past 13 months, maybe it is a little more self-awareness. Maybe it's recognizing that life is short and we need to get the most of what we want out of it.

I know I have. Look forward to seeing you soon.

Here's To The Women Who Made It Their Business To Pave The Way For Others

As a tribute during the month of March, which is officially designated as National Women's History Month, I want to give a huge shout out to the women who paved the way as entrepreneurs, businesswomen, and leaders in every profession and field of endeavor. Throughout history, women have had to fight for every dream that didn't coincide with what the times considered appropriate. And for women of color, the struggle has been even greater.
